JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA -- (Marketwire) -- 05/10/12 -- AngloGold Ashanti (NYSE: AU) posted first-quarter adjusted headline earnings of $429m, more than double the same period a year earlier, and approved the development of three growth projects.

The company's board gave the go-ahead to invest $1.9bn over the coming five years to expand the Cripple Creek & Victor mine in the US and develop the Mongbwalu and Kibali projects in the Democratic Republic of Congo. The projects will be funded internally and are expected to contribute additional annual production of more than 500,000 ounces to AngloGold.

AngloGold plans to increase production to between 5.4 million and 5.6 million ounces by about 2014 from a combination of new projects in Africa, Australia and South America and through the expansion of some existing operations. The growth is expected to be funded from internal sources. The company, which eliminated its hedge book in 2010, has seen improved earnings and cash flow in recent years from full exposure to a rising bullion price and improvements at key assets.

"The first quarter has shown that we continue to deliver the earnings and cash flow we need to drive our growth plans and further diversify our portfolio," Chief Executive Officer Mark Cutifani said. "We're now able to invest in our portfolio to deliver growth from an attractive suite of projects which are each of manageable size and carry relatively low technical execution risk."

AngloGold expects to invest $982m for its 45% share of the development of the Kibali mine, a joint venture with Sokimo, the DRC's state-owned gold mining company (10%) and with Randgold Resources, the project manager and operator, which also has a 45% stake. The mine is expected to pour its first gold at the end of next year and to produce at an annual rate of about 600,000 ounces a year for the first decade of its life. At Mongbwalu, a joint venture in the DRC in which AngloGold has an 86.22% stake, AngloGold has made an initial investment of $345m which will deliver average annual production of about 130,000 ounces in each of its first three years. The company plans to quickly expand the operation as it adds more gold resources in the area once first gold is produced, which is expected to occur toward the end of next year.

At Cripple Creek, in the US state of Colorado, the expansion at a capital cost of approximately $557m, to be invested over the next five years, is expected to help boost the mine's production to more than 400,000 ounces. In tandem with a further mine-life extension project targeted for the end of the decade, AngloGold expects the mine to produce at that level until at least 2025, after which production is anticipated to remain around at least 350,000 ounces for approximately another 10 years. There is also significant underground potential, which will be accessed for exploration as part of the current development project. The three new projects announced today complement the Tropicana project in Australia, which is expected to start production at the end of next year, as well as the Córrego do Sítio mine in Brazil, which is currently commissioning.

First Quarter

Adjusted headline earnings in the three months to March 31 more than doubled to $429m, or 111 US cents a share, compared with $203m, or 53 US cents the previous year. Production of 981,000 ounces at a total cash cost of $794/oz compared with 1,039Moz at $706/oz in the same quarter of last year.

The operating result was negatively impacted with Section 54s and safety related stoppages at the group's South African operations, while the other three operating regions delivered production according to plan.

Tragically, four employee fatalities were recorded at separate incidents at the Moab Khotsong, Mponeng and Savuka mines in South Africa and at Cerro Vanguardia, in Argentina. The company remains committed to eliminating fatalities at its mines through the continued implementation of its Project ONE operating model and continual improvement of safety protocols. Success to date is evident in its all accident frequency rate, which at 8.17 per million hours worked, is the lowest in the company's history.

Outlook

Full year(1) 2012 production remains 4.3Moz-4.4Moz at a total cash cost of $780/oz-$805/oz. For the second quarter(2), production is expected to be around 1.04Moz at a total cash cost of $840/oz to $845/oz.

(1) Assuming an exchange rate of R7.40/$ and an oil price of $110/barrel for the year.

(2) Assuming an exchange rate of R7.70/$ and an oil price of $125/barrel.
