Five Star Equities Provides Stock Research on Archer Daniels Midland and BioFuel Energy

NEW YORK, NY -- (Marketwire) -- 08/17/12 -- Skyrocketing corn prices and lower gasoline demand in the U.S. has seen profits of ethanol producers drop drastically. Producers have begun to idle plants and/or slow production as a result. "Even the most profitable plants out there are barely breaking even in the current environment," said Matthew Farwell, a New York-based analyst for Imperial Capital LLC. Five Star Equities examines the outlook for companies in the Ethanol Industry and provides equity research on Archer Daniels Midland Company (NYSE: ADM) and BioFuel Energy Corp. (NASDAQ: BIOF).

Ethanol producers have battled record high corn prices, and tight domestic supply. The drought in the Farm Belt has driven corn-futures to an all-time high in July. Prices have relaxed a bit since then but have still surged over 40 percent since early June. It is estimated that approximately 40 percent of the nation's corn output is consumed by the ethanol sector. Major producer Archer Daniels Midland recently stated that their ethanol margins had crumbled to a loss of over 20 cents per gallon.

ADM delivers clean-burning ethanol to refiners through an expansive network of trucks, railcars, barges and terminals. The company makes ethanol from corn through an efficient process that also produces large amounts of animal feed. Bioproducts results for the quarter ended June 30, 2012 decreased $172 million to a loss of $61 million.

Biofuel Energy was founded in 2005 with initial production from two plants commencing in 2008. With both plants active, BioFuel Energy expects to produce 230 million gallons of fuel grade ethanol and approximately 720,000 tons of distiller grains annually.
