The consistent delivery of accurate analyses relies solely on two factors, namely: market awareness and industry insight. Recent market drivers include a rise in new home sales to 5.7% in September to an annualized pace of 389,000 units, slightly stronger than market expectations for an increase to 385,000, recent confirmation of continued monetary stimulus and an unchanged FOMC policy and recent moderation of existing home sales in the US to 4.75 million annualized units in September 2012 from 4.83 million reported in the previous month. When it comes to discovering the right edge at the right time, all these factors play into effect.
