WEST HARRISON, N.Y., April 4, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- Graphite One Resources Inc. (GPH.V and GPHOF: OTCQX) is featured in the April 2, 2013 issue of Flaherty Special Situation Newsletter. At a moment when dominant global supplier China is restricting exports of graphite, Graphite One Resources' huge Graphite Creek property on the Seward Peninsula in Alaska is on a fast track development to open a mine by 2017. This is the U.S.' only major graphite resource with a National Instrument NI 43-101 compliant resource report. The property is the largest graphite resource in North America and has the potential to surpass the combined output of the rest of the world's graphite producers. Labeled "a supply critical mineral" by the U.S. and "a strategic critical mineral" by the European Union, high quality flake graphite will play a crucial role in the dawning of a new age of green energy technologies. A reliable supply will be crucial to the creation of green energy technology jobs in the U.S., which is why Editor Bob Flaherty picked Graphite One Resources as his own personal pick in his upcoming annual Favorites of the Famous feature.
