

Darren W. Woods has been elected president of Exxon Mobil Corporation (NYSE:XOM) and a member of the board of directors, effective Jan. 1, 2016. The election of Woods, who is currently senior vice president of the corporation, was made during a meeting of the ExxonMobil board of directors on Wednesday.

With the addition of Woods, the ExxonMobil board is comprised of 13 directors, 11 of whom are non-employee directors.

Rex W. Tillerson, 63, continues his position of chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the corporation.

Woods, 50, was elected to his current position of senior vice president and a member of the management committee of the corporation June 1, 2014.

A native of Wichita, Kansas, Woods earned a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering from Texas A&M University and a master's degree in business administration from Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management.

He joined Exxon Company International in 1992 as a planning analyst. He held a number of domestic and international assignments for ExxonMobil Refining & Supply Company, ExxonMobil Chemical Company and Exxon Company International, and he served as manager of investor relations for Exxon Mobil Corporation.

Woods held positions as vice president of supply and transportation and director of refining for Europe, Africa and the Middle East for ExxonMobil Refining & Supply Company and vice president of ExxonMobil Chemical Company.

In 2012, he was appointed president of ExxonMobil Refining & Supply Company and a vice president of the corporation.
