DENVER, Feb. 20, 2019 - For the first time in its storied history, West Texas's Permian Basin will pass a major milestone in March, when its production is forecast to exceed four million daily barrels (4 MMBOPD), according to U.S. Department of Energy projections.

The Permian now accounts for 48% of all unconventional oil output and is producing more than all the major basins combined when oil was just under $100 per barrel in June 2013.

To catch up on what independent oil and gas companies are planning, EnerCom invites you to hear live presentations from a full slate of exploration and production companies at its Texas-based oil and gas investment conference—EnerCom Dallas—on Feb. 27-28. But that's not all.

Besides C-level management team presentations by oil and gas companies developing assets in the Permian, Haynesville, Eagle Ford and other major North American shale plays, the Gulf of Mexico and Latin America, the 2019 EnerCom Dallas conference features strong insight from energy industry leaders.

Institutional investors, portfolio managers, financial analysts, CIOs, brokerage firms and other investment community professionals who invest in the oil and gas sector should register online to attend the EnerCom Dallas investment conference.

- Register now for EnerCom Dallas, Feb. 27-28, 2019: matching oil & gas industry executives and buy-side investment institutions
- Presenting company schedule is posted on EnerCom Dallas website

Presenters include leading independent E&Ps and oilfield service companies working in the Permian, Eagle Ford, Marcellus, Haynesville, Gulf of Mexico, Latin America, and Canada.

EnerCom Dallas presenters include but are not limited to:

- Liberty Oilfield Services (NYSE: LBRT)

- Unit Corporation (NYSE: UNT)
- Talos Energy (NYSE: TALO)
