Against this backdrop, interest in uranium has been on the climb, and shares of Uranium Energy Corp. (NYSE American: UEC) have gained strong interest. Texas-based UEC is a pure-play American uranium company with a portfolio of ISR projects, including hub-and-spoke operations anchored by its fully licensed Hobson Processing Facility in Texas; Reno Creek, the largest permitted pre-construction ISR uranium project in America; and a pipeline of resource-stage uranium projects in Arizona, Colorado (uranium/vanadium), New Mexico and Paraguay.

UEC has also diversified its uranium asset base by adding a large equity stake in Uranium Royalty Corp. and launching a program where it is buying physical uranium stored in the United States. With the projected demand for uranium, this should be like money in the bank for UEC. Elsewhere, in Paraguay, the company controls the Alto Parana project, one of the world's highest-grade and largest ferro-titanium deposits.
