The population was invited to experience sound and vibration simulations and meet acoustics experts.

In addition to explaining the sound and vibration phenomena that surround us, the evening aimed to collect the concerns, understandings and proposals for improvement formulated by citizens regarding Falco's Horne 5 Project.

Martin Duclos, Director, Environment and Community Relations, said: "All comments will be read carefully and each question will be answered. At Falco, every opinion counts, helps fuel our thinking and plays an important role in our approach to continuous improvement and commitment to the community."

At the end of the workshop, the participants expressed their interest in collaborating on the development of a program aimed at maintaining the integrity of residences and neighboring infrastructure of the future mining complex.

Hélène Cartier, Vice-President, Environment, Sustainable Development and Community Relations, declared: "I would like to thank all the participants who took the time to come meet us and share their concerns. We firmly believe that this type of exercise will help improve the project for the benefit of the communities. We look forward to beginning collaborative work on the future program to preserve the integrity of residences and infrastructure."

Falco considers it essential to hold public hearings on the project given its importance for the community and for regional development.
